

'Beat the Heat'
Ice Cream Party at Taylor

Taylor president Dr. David Williams (right) serves ice cream at an impromptu patio party on a warm fall day in Edmonton. Part of what makes Taylor special is the close-knit community of students, faculty and staff — because we all know that little things make a big difference. (But who are we kidding — ice cream on a hot day is NOT a little thing!!)

The call to ministry comes with the need for thoughtful preparation. As you consider the options for ministry training, we think you'll be impressed by what make a Taylor education unique.

Taylor is responding to the needs of adult learners across Canada and around the world. We are changing the way we deliver theological education and ministry training, adding more online, modular and weekend courses to our regular semester-long classroom instruction.

Students from many denominations, ethnic and cultural backgrounds are studying with us. Our dedicated faculty place a strong emphasis on spiritual formation, practical training and field education – key distinctives that prepare Taylor grads for a lifetime of joyful discipleship and effective service.

The Taylor difference makes a difference! As Hudson Taylor once said, "A little thing is a little thing but faithfulness in little things is a big thing"
